HUXLEY
COLLEGE OF THE ENVIRONMENT

40th ANNIVERSARY BOOK

Green Fire: 40 Years at Huxley College of the Environment (working title)

A book commemorating and chronicling forty years of environmental leadership, education, inspiration and change

WHAT IS IT?

Western Washington University is celebrating the 40th anniversary of Huxley College during 2010 and, as part of these commemorative efforts, one of the Huxley College faculty members, Pulitzer Prize winning journalist and author, William "Bill" Dietrich is working on a book project to chronicle the history of the College as the oldest environmental college in the nation.

The story of Huxley College will be revealed, in part, through the profiles of 40 of its alumni. Through narrative text, interviews and full color photos, the book will explore the role of the College in the environmental movement and its connection to a wide array of leaders, activists and innovators. Do you know someone who should be included? Contact manca.valum@wwu.edu to share your thoughts!

HOW IS IT POSSIBLE?

Of course the success of a project like this depends not only on the talents of those involved but also on support from the University, the College and our alumni. With this in mind, a special fund within the Western Washington University Foundation has been set up to receive contributions made to support the history project. Gifts to the fund will provide support for Bill and a team of Environmental Journalism students to meet, interview and profile selected alumni and write the narrative text. Funds will also be used to cover costs for professional and student photography, professional design and publication. You can help support the project by making a gift or pledge today! Contact manca.valum@wwu.edu or this form:
