

Response to Student Advising Demand

The AAC specializes in orientation advising, academic planning, General University Requirement advising, exploring and choosing a major/minor, University academic policies, low scholastic standing, reinstatement, graduation evaluations and other related topics. Once a student is declared in their major/minor, they will often then seek out advising from their academic department. Over the past several years, the AAC has experienced significant increases in student advising demand and has taken measures to address these rising student needs.

Student Demand for the Academic Advising Center 2010 - 2016

Data:

Since 2010, student appointments have increased 77% and the total number of students accessing the AAC has increased 76%

Action:

Due to the continual increase of student usage of the AAC, measures to scale up staffing included hiring a new full-time Academic/Career Advisor and an Advisor to assist during peak advising times throughout the year.

Institutionally, this has been recognized as a priority with a funding request submitted to the state legislature for additional advisors.
